Have you any rhyme and reason to these endless snaps? But why of course. A strategic transformer matrix is humming in the old upstairs. Basic core points. Countless adaptations and castings. Reflections to unbearable self-induced stupidity.

Any number of things shall not pass! Not because the present Gandalf says so. Simply because all this/your hallucinated insanity is in direct defiance of actuality itself. Racing in the terminal tunnel. Maybe snap out of it sometime?

Today, for a meta-rant – looking at why should one in general be so confrontational, snappy. Concluding our octagon of first Brief Snaps. What we have here is a particular tuning, a rhetorical device, an adaptation to the audience.

It's not that I am a most angry and frustrated individual in need of an outlet for venting and ranting. There is a certain baseline message, and in my brain there is a transformer matrix rendering it out in diverse modalities.

We could do emotionally numb and detached point-by-point walkthroughs. We could open emotionally immersive and soothing streams. We could fluff out interesting perspectives, paint the sky rich with potentials. We could lash out like a thunderbolt, catalytic impacts to select points.

We could engage in analytical dialectics in a more systematic frame. We could do deep-haul integrations for those of you who can hold an ocean's worth in your minds. Or we could do all of these in a cascade in a single session. But alas the audience has limits – we have to adjust.

Brief Snaps here is the thunderbolt – rather in your face. A lightning cutting through the veils of darkness, a catalytic force to generate engagement in the inertia. Because when it comes to anything slightly deeper or insight otherwise more consequential in your lives, you lot are so keen to bypass, skip. Did not see that, it did not happen, was never said, moving on.

And that shall not pass. Bypassing shall not pass, self-deception, other deception shall not pass. Delusions, their weaving into a consequential catastrophe, aka the world as we know it – that shall not pass. Now I'm not the epic Gandalf, holding back the beast of the corrupt world on a bridge somewhere in the depths. The message itself, the voice of reality, says "this shall not pass".

Unsustainable levels of stupidity stemming from self-blinding, willing ignorance – that shall not pass, simply due to its own impossibility. It goes absolutely counter the grain of actuality itself, and therefore will burn, will perish. Brief Snaps is simply a set of samplers from the jukebox drawing from the heavy metal record archives of actuality itself.

So snap snap wakey-up here – or wait for the legions to arrive. Yikes! But actually seriously – exactly that.
