Push and Pull

Reflectors. Vladimir Putin and Back Alley Judo Mind Tricks. 🏰 Raiders of the Lost Arch. Coding and compiling systems of consciousness. 🏰 Origins and geneology of Skibidi revealed for the first time.

Whatever.

Should you compile Judo and Code without the Skibidi-flag trolled up high. Even the Magic Mirror will not save you from serious trouble on the road! Don't lose the trail of the White Rabbit. We are the Dora Emon Express.

White Rabbit. Always Remember. Never Forget. Disremember. White Rabbit Consciousness.

Skibidii... Skibidii... Judo Code... Skibidii... Skibidii...
Judo Code... Skibidii... Judo Code... Now what the * does that even mean? Three truly fascinating topics, which I'll readily elucidate once I pull over. Okay?

Judo, the epic martial art of Jigoro Kano, the game and play of push and pull. But it's not that you're pushing or pulling, you're simply reflecting. And in that way you provide a passage for the force that seeks to move.
Those were my childhood lessons, those are lessons for today.

But do you know who the epic Judoka is? On the world stage we have Vladimir Putin. He is a veteran. And if you understand the ways of back alley judo tricks, you get a glimpse of where he's coming from and what the game is.

Code, then, is the weaving of coherent logical structures, the mapping of systems and their compilation. Here, riding through the mirror, we are raiders of the lost arch, the architecture of human consciousness, codified in the patterns of your consciousness. Fascinating.

And what the hell is Skibidi? I'll tell you. Skibidi is the bastard descendant of the white rabbit and the yolo penguins of yore. Skibidi is what the hell ever. And that's important.

If you are ever so self-serious about your Judo and your Code – if you forget the essential Skibidi of your life – you lose the trail of the White Rabbit. Keep that in mind.

Put these three subtopics together and you've cracked some of the greatest mysteries of life. You may one day be eligible to ride the Doraemon Express all the way to extreme enlightenment.
